Figure 2. Schematic of decision tree classification for a single aerosol spectrum. From left to right, mass spectra are normalized with respect to total ion current, forming the elements of a normalized vector $X$. A trained decision tree then applies a series of tests to a discreet number of peaks in order to arrive at a categorical aerosol prediction.